SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1873.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday.

Ministers stated, in answer to questions, that the last payment made by the Government to the Rev. J. S. Hassall on account of the Berriina gaol chapel was £100, which was paid on the 15th inst. The Government do not aware whether any payment had, since then, been made to Mr. Hassall in consideration of that service through the Bishop of Sydney, and that the Government would take notice of Queensland, that an agreement was made with Mr. Loder for the removal of obstructions caused by fallen timber on the road from Nine-mile Creek to Singalong, which was subsequently cancelled, and that the Government would take notice of a land order made that 123 nominations and deposits had been made to the colony with the Immigration Agent under the Treasury notice of the 15th June last; that a person who asked Crown land in exchange of a land order was not regarded by the Government as a holder in reum, and that the Government would take cognizance of breaches or alleged breaches of the residence condition, in cases of selections of adjoining lands by the holders of Volunteer land orders, before the expiration of three years from the date of selection.

It was resolved, on the motion of Mr. GARRITT, to go into committee to consider the recommendations of the report of the Select Committee on the Education Bill. Mr. James Twaddle; and it was also resolved, on the motion of Mr. HUNTS, to go into committee, on the 16th day, to consider the introduction of a bill to amend the law relating to letters of registration of inventions.

Leave was given to Mr. Stewart to introduce a bill to render certain promises unlawful and void; and he withdrew. He was subsequently brought up, and read a first time.

Mr. PARKES gave notice that he would on Wednesday next move for leave to introduce the Electoral Bill, and the Land Agency Bill.

The House then went into committee to consider the collection of towns and roads throughout the colony under the control of the Government.

Mr. NIXON moved a resolution affirming that the introduction of such a bill was desirable, and he said as he believed it would be carried by a large majority, he would reserve his remarks for the second reading of the bill.

Mr. PARKES supported the resolution, as it would enable the hon. member to introduce the bill, but that the Government would not be thereby committed to its measure.

A debate ensued, in which Mr. FOSTER, Mr. LEACH, Mr. MACINTOSH, Mr. HEINS, Mr. S. O'HANES, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. GANNETT, Mr. KANSER, and others took part. The resolution was carried, and carried on division by 22 to 7, reported, and the report was adopted.

A resolution moved for the appointment of a select committee, consisting of Messrs. Banks, Thomas, Robertson, Webb, Parkes, Teeco, Fitzpatrick, Lucas, Burns, Rannell, and himself as mover, to inquire into and report upon the present working and financial condition of all the municipal institutions of the colony.

Mr. PARKES approved of the appointment of the committee.

The Hon. member supported the motion, contending that the committee could render valuable service by collecting evidence and reporting on the financial resources and management of the various municipalities.

Mr. MACINTOSH, in replying, pointed out that the members named in his resolution to serve on the committee were the gentlemen chosen by the Houses by ballot, during the previous session for a similar purpose.

The resolution was put and agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.5 p.m., till 4 p.m. on Tuesday next.

THE VOLUNTARIES REPORT OF THE PUBLIC CHARITIES COMMISSION.

Commission, given in our yesterday's issue on the voluntary system, this city will demand anxious and careful, and soon seen, consideration. The topics discussed have been often before the public in a broad and desultory way. We may say at once that with the main features of this report we have strong concurrence. The Infirmary has been standing reproach. The descriptions given heretofore are not diminished or explained; and although the expense involved in a new erection may be very considerable, yet it is perfectly clear that nothing can be supplied in the present establishment on which reliance can be placed.

The first condition of reform is in the construction of the Infirmary itself. The existence of permanent infection, commonly leading to serious diseases, is a call for interference in those who profess to provide a public hospital. This has been long reported as the objection to the present construction, but the details given here are a lamentable deficiency in the means of cure.

Mr. BENDISH states that the Infirmary, condemned years ago; that it is very old, and has never been repaired; that it requires new wall-facing, a new roof, and new floors; that the walls are old, and the plastering fall away; that the operator's room is damp, inadequate, and "a horrible place"; that there is a deficiency of drainage and of water; that there are times when it would have been impossible to obtain a warm bath; that the offices are disgusting; and that the heaps of clothes with vermin present a dismal spectacle. Where so little attention is paid to the living of course no concern is given to the dead. There is lack of fresh air, of course, and all the appliances which are needed for the recovery of life. It is needless to go into details which have been so often repeated; and the conclusion drawn from the state of the Infirmary is that the building is unsuitable, that they cannot be repaired, and ought to be demolished. The control and management of a hospital will depend upon its construction more than on almost any other conditions. If there is not sufficient ventilation, if the officers are too small, if the stores for cooking are inefficient, and if the means of cleanliness do not exist, it is impossible to preserve order in the management of the establishment.

The account given of the appliances for the disposal of the persons in charge shows them to be incredibly deficient. There are some things we may expect in an establishment occupied for the most part by persons in humble condition. The food issued from being who has never been careful himself to preserve cleanliness, and who has become weak and helpless, must bring into the hospitals many causes unfavourable to management and cure. We are, however, shocked to find that the heaps of garments often stained with corruption long remain without purification, partly we presume from the deficiency of water, and partly from the want of room. But surely these are evils that ought not to exist at the date of this report. In spite of the high commendations given to the superintendents, we have to summon all the extensions we can recall to justify the praise which has been given. It is, however, not in the power of any ~~kind~~ to have order in its establishment like the hospital of a construction so defective as asserted in this report, and if all the architectural arrangements which we regulate for efficiency are wanting. In well-regulated hospitals labour is economical. Every approved invention and improvement. The number of attendants is diminished, and their remuneration increased. Mechanical appliances are extensively used, and thus the cost is abated, with a grand improvement in the order and quiet of the institution. There are other points in the report which glance partly at the material and partly at the moral fitness of the hospital government. Some instances are given of insubordination which must necessarily be fatal to effective management. "Order is heaven's first law," and wherever responsibility, trust, and obedience must be reposed in authority, there must be a willingness in those who rule to support authority without indulging in excesses. There seems to have been very much to desire in several departments, and the account of the mismanagement and waste presents a remarkable example, both of great cost to the country and great occasional destitution. The careful housewife who reads the report will raise her hands with astonishment, and will rejoice that she is not to pay the bills. The locality to which a hospital should be removed is a point not readily settled. But these wants will be ultimately met by new forms of construction where time will be lost in distance. We are glad to see, however, that the Commissioners are properly impressed with the importance of fresh air to the system of cure. We have much to learn upon this subject. In Paris some remarkable facts have been produced, showing that around all corrupt bodies there are emanations which take an animated form, although invisible to the eye, and that diseases are propagated by their presence. "Everything there is a cause, which," although not penetrable to our senses, nevertheless reveals itself in its effects.

Of the proposed structure of a new hospital there are several plans given. Those are too various to admit any non-professional man to give an opinion. It is strongly asserted by some authorities that the pillars should be the best, and that buildings used for curative purposes ought to be all temporary. The glass constructions spoken of by Dr. ROBERTS probably might be extended greatly, and in a country where the material for glass has possessed a reputation for nearly a century, it is possible it might be supplied on the spot. We are certainly impressed by the value of the suggestion, as it seems to be the only means by which a permanent building can be held as a hospital in the face of those facts given by the report. As there are several discrepancies of opinion between the Commissioners, and others who have been consulted on the same subject, there is still room for deliberation. No plan appears to unite all the advantages, and the deficiencies of every system often arise from the nature of things and must be suffered because they cannot be prevented without countervailing disadvantages. But when we find our hospital at the centre of a great city is liable to these impeachments, we are bound to express our regret that it has continued so long. The property which forms the site of the present hospital is one of the most valuable. By a mockery of fate the doctors who cure our political maladies sit next door to the Commissioners who cure our physical diseases. There is a strange affinity between the disorders of the mind and those of the State, but the same prescription will not always avail. At any rate it would seem to be quite unnecessary to preserve this close connection, and it would be better for all parties if the professions were more distinct.

With the resolution passed by the late Intercolonial Conference on the subject of commercial reciprocity our readers are already well acquainted, as, also with the action taken thereupon by the SECRETARY OF STATE, and the Act subsequently passed by the Imperial Parliament. But, accompanying the papers just laid before the Assembly, is one which now for the first time makes us acquainted with a despatch on the subject by Sir HERCULES ROBINSON, dated 24th of February last.

With his EXCELLENCY's general opinion on the subject of free-trade our readers are already familiar; for they have been clearly and boldly stated on more than one occasion; and it is therefore scarcely necessary to say that he discusses the reciprocal question from a free-trade point of view. He admits, what the Conference itself would readily admit, that the colonial demand for power to establish reciprocity does not spring from a desire to develop free-trade, but from the opposite desire, — to stimulate colonial production by protection, and that what has been wanted has been a larger market for colonial articles than the area of one colony alone can furnish. "The object," he says, "ought to be obtained by reciprocity conventions is really to extend the area of protection for local producers." What is wanted is, that the products of each colony should be protected not only at home, but in its neighbouring colonies.

But this is intercolonial protection, and not intercolonial free-trade. This, is, we believe, a correct statement of the case. Those who have strongly urged the policy of free-trade are favourable to giving up the existing localities of protection, and of substituting a Federal Commercial League against the world, in lieu of having each colony fight single-handed against its neighbours as well as against the world. Our protectionists, in fact, may be said to consist of two classes: First, those who are intensely provincial, whose enthusiasm is only for their own little bit of territory, and who are as hostile to their near neighbours as they are to the rest of the world; and secondly, those who are so far liberal as to be willing to erase all frontier Customs lines within the territory of Australia itself, who wish to surround it with a cordon to keep off the transiting outside producers. The latter has been pretty clearly explained and understood previously, but with his EXCELLENCY's despatch there is an argument, which, if new, has never at least been so clearly stated, or so fully worked out. He comforts the SECRETARY for the COLONIES by showing that whatever may be the aspirations or intentions of the protectionist party, an Australian Customs union or reciprocity arrangement established in the interest of protection is practically impossible, and that the new powers given will therefore be harmless.

He points out the variety of industries that exists due to the variation of climate and natural resources, and shows that, in consequence thereof the colonies could not interchange on fair terms. Queensland, for instance, produces sugar largely, and New South Wales to some extent; which, none the other colonies do. There is no excise either of the producing colonies, while there is an import duty of five shillings per cwt which is practically protection. If a uniform import duty without an excise were imposed and the proceeds divided according to population, the sugar-growing colonies would get a share of a revenue upwards of £100,000, but but little or nothing. So too, in regard to kerosene oil, which is manufactured only in New South Wales. If the manufacture were quite equal to the home consumption, the revenue would get nothing from the duty. But if New South Wales shared in the oil revenue of the whole of Australia, it would so far forth receive from a fund towards which its own consumption had contributed nothing, a division of the whole Customs revenue according to population would be fair if the contribution to a revenue which it has made to the population; but if the contribution proved to be very unequal, then a proportionate division would be unfair. The difficulties might be partly got over by excises; but then they establish restrictions which are always galling to manufacturers and sometimes interfere very injuriously with productive industry. Even then, is the additional consideration that, so far as the size of the market is concerned, the larger colonies will give far more than they can get. If each of the colonies come to get up separately what it would gain, it would be lost to a protection union. The larger colonies would probably be out winners, and that, so far as purely local interests are concerned, they had better allow their protection to remain as it is, purely localised.

It is very doubtful too at present whether the particular interest that we now protect could in any way be so compensated as to induce them to consider their near neighbours as their brothers. The Victorian farmers and millers, for instance, at present rejoice in import duty of a shilling a cwt. on wheat twice as much on flour. South Australia's farmers stand outside waiting to pour their produce, and beseeching the Victorian farmer to expand his ideas and appreciate the blessings of intercolonial free trade. But asks what he is to get in return if he makes this surrender. Protection means to him increase in the market price of his produce. What is there that he buys either from South Australia or Tasmania which will be proportionally cheapened? Precisely the same argument applies to the sawyer, the market gardener, the confectioner, and the brewer who appeared to assent to the free importation of colonial timber, vegetables, fruits, jams, &c., beer.

The United States of America gave a rural protection to America equal to America's urban but then in America there is no Customs union. The Customs revenue is not divided out among the several states and territories in proportion to population. The whole of it is devoted purely federal purposes, leaving the State revenues to be raised in other ways. In Germany there was a Zollverein, but there was then no great variety of climate or production. We have been proposed here was to apply the German system to a country somewhat in the condition of America; that is to say, to apply a policy which has been successful in contiguous countries of homogeneous production to contiguous countries which are not of homogeneous production.

The difficulties in the way of a protective Customs union do not exist in the way of a free trade union, but at the same time such an arrangement would limit the indirect revenue of each colony, and force some form of direct taxation—and for that there is scarcely a colony at present prepared—or else a large revenue from taxable articles. His Excellency points out that the free trade policy is to tax articles of large consumption that are wholly imported from without. But some of the colonies can do this to a greater extent than their present separate capacity than they could if they were in a union. For instance, Victoria has a tax on coal which is not at all protective because it produces no coal, and the worst speaking of the same revenue is true of its tax on kerosene oil, on sugar, maize, and on oranges, bananas, pineapples, &c. In a free trade union it would have to surrender all revenue from these articles and of course assuming that the revenue still required it would have to make good the difference by some other tax.

We seem, therefore, to be driven to the following general conclusions; first, that protective Customs union would be very difficult if not impossible, or at any rate would require such complicated compensatory arrangements as would practically deprive the smaller colonies of the advantages they hope to obtain; secondly, that the larger colonies would require to not all of the colonies to supplement their revenues by direct taxation or else to make the duties on imports considerably heavier and more productive than they are at present.

A considerable sensation has been excited by the misfortune of the Oscar, and the captain and his family, and crew. The last article indeed, is to be left out of the account, seeing being foreigners and totally destitute. We are informed that the captain's wife and family, with scanty help when arriving at midnight, drenched with water, and hardly escaping with their lives. We must receive with great reserve imputations of cruelty in a case so proverbially humane. The manner of receiving strangers will depend upon the arrangements of the "host," which is commonly enough when there are means apparent to the score. Whether, however, the actual condition of the unfortunates who claimed aid at a late hour was really understood may be to inference. We are so differently constituted that we need to be appreciated by a human judge; beside that, there is one kind of flesh of men, and another of beasts, and their mode of utterance varies with capacity and their nature. We should, however, be very sorry that it should go forth to the world that the people of Sydney heard such a misfortune without sympathy. There are no bad incidents in this series of disasters. The country is a beautiful life—thousands of year who are destined to a water grave, multitudes who are cast upon the mercy of waves. This may be thought to excite disregard of a calamity which is but too common. But we question whether the British community will seek an excuse for indifference. There are many thousands of persons on the ocean every moment exposed to utter destitution. What the fate of one this year may be the lot of another in a year to come. The benign condition of insurance, for such it must be notwithstanding gross abuses, offers relief to all classes of people who go down to sea in ships, or encounter its perils. Those who neglect to avail themselves of this resource

A special general meeting of the shareholders of the Australasian S. N. Company, held this afternoon, it was resolved to recommend the appointment of Mr. Thomas Cadell to the vacant seat at the board of directors. The past week has not been marked by any important news in the Sydney market. Sales have been unusually low, and prices difficult to maintain. There have been no alterations in the value of bank stock, and prices close the same as last Friday. City sold at 103; Joint Stock at 131; Commercial at 78; New South Wales at 49; New South Wales Government debentures are very firmly held; sales could be made freely at a reduction on holders' prices. Long dated five brought, 108; to 108 1/2. Interimable at 106 1/2. Queensland shares wanted at 112 1/2. Buyers of insurance shares were not numerous, and only United were dealt in. There were inquiries for Steam at a decline on previous quotations. A sale of Australasian was effected at a reduction of 10 1/2.
